THE PINE NUT MINES.

THE GOVERNOR EXPLAINS HIS WORDS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

He is Always Willing to Assist Nevada But Wants Evidence of Truth.

Since the San Francisco papers have quoted Governor Colcord regarding the Pine Nut mining excitement, many conjectures have arisen as to the probable truth of the report.

An Appeal representative visited the Governor yesterday and secured the truth from Nevada's Chief Executive himself.

It appears that at the time Senator Haines in an interview stated that he had been down the mine and thought it the most wonderful thing of the kind he had ever seen, Governor Colcord was in San Francisco at the Palace and read the dispatch, shortly after which a reporter found him and secured only a partial opinion.

The first words from the Governor were, "I know nothing whatever about the mines which now exist," after which he continued in regard to the probable exaggeration of the report and the excitability of Mr. Haines, whose fervor he thought, had carried him away:

"I passed through and prospect that same country twelve years ago in company with Zine Barnes, and did not find the formation as good as that in Red Canyon or further South. My remarks in San Francisco were intended for the best interests of this State.

"I am thoroughly mindful of the wants of the people and the necessity and advantages of an increase in our population, but I do not think it to the advantage of our inhabitants to misrepresent anything so as to induce fortune seekers to come here and discover afterwards that they have been deceived.

"The entire country has been taken up, and should miners come here nothing is left for them. The cost of a trip would amount to considerable, and the disappointment would bring forth a howl of indignation from the unlucky ones.

"Yes, I am willing to go out to Pine Nut and pay the expenses of any number of representative mining men who accompany me, as I stated in San Francisco, but I have recently learned that Mr. Zirn refuses to admit anyone for a week or two, or until the mine is further developed.

"This is a peculiar condition of things, but it exists, and is a pronounced drawback on any steps to prove the reports."

He further said to this writer: "If yourself or anyone will secure me a permit to investigate the mine I will be on the spot as soon as possible afterwards and if there is anything at all to warrant it I will assist in pushing Pine Nut to the front and even put capital in to develop it. Furthermore I will do all in my power to interest all other men who wish to see the State succeed.

"The fact that Mr. Zirn has a rich vein of gold bearing ore as thick as the hand, does not indicate the existence of a bonanza. These small, wonderfully rich streaks are never lasting and there is no reason why this one should. "You say that he says the main ledge is two hundred and twenty-seven feet wide and will assay $40 a ton which I do not for a moment believe. If this is true it is the biggest bonanza ever found in this State for fifteen years and Pinenut will come to the front without any artificial booming and will in little or no time be established as a mining country worthy of recognition. When this is proven the people of Nevada will find me ready and anxious to throw all my energy and influence into the new field.

"I am prepared at any time to struggle for Nevada, a State on whose soil I have lived and prospered for many years and whose welfare to me is of much importance, but in justice to myself and the people I reserve the right of conservative speech in a matter as delicate as this one. The absolute truth must be reached first and then action will follow from many willing hands and hearts, that long to redeem Nevada as thoroughly as I."

The above statement from the Governor places him aright in the eyes of all thinking people, and dispels the impression left by the San Francisco reporter, that he had been there recently.

The statement made to the Associated Press reporter by Mr. Haines in the presence of another gentleman led that reporter to believe that Haines had been down the shaft himself, as the first person was used entirely in the interview, whereas the men who did go down were Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Hawkins, whose glowing accounts were on a par with those of the ex-Senator.

Nevada papers will do well to hold themselves in check a short time and not condemn the district when they know nothing of its resources.

Rattled Again.

"Did you not regard the evidence of the child corroborated by eye witnesses as conclusive?" "I did not know the child ever testified."—Appeal.

District Attorney Summerfield never made such a statement. It seems impossible for Sam Davis to maintain a position without resorting to falsehood.—Tribune.

The editor of the evening paper twangs his second fiddle again and makes the customary discord in the above. The Grand Juror who gave the information to the Appeal will swear to it and repeats again that District Attorney Summerfield did acknowledge his ignorance. Let the Tribune tell the public what it assumes to know.
